

VII GOVERNO CONSTITUCIONAL

LAW NO. 15 /2017 August 23, 2017 PRIVATE INVESTMENT LAW

The promotion of the private sector of the economy is a mandate deriving from Article 140 of the Constitution of the Republic, which determines the State's duty to promote national investments and create the conditions to attract foreign investments, taking into account national interests.

In this view, the guidelines outlined in the 2011-2030 Strategic Development Plan for economic growth and private sector promotion, as conditions that are essential for job creation, diversification of sources of income, and sustainability of our economy, calls for the adoption of a new vision for attracting both national and external investments.

The revision provided for by this law thus modernizes the current legal regime of private investment, removing some outdated devices that no longer comply with best practices on the matter and ensuring compliance of the national investment legislation with the guidelines of the Global ASEAN Comprehensive Investment Agreement, aiming at a national alignment on this matter and Timor-Leste's membership to the organization.

In this context, the emphasis of the new private investment law will be directed not only on the fiscal and customs benefits, and incentives offered but will also emphasize private investment promotion and facilitation, investment protection, as well as the attention and quality of investor support in the post-investment phase.

The National Parliament, therefore, under the terms of Article 95 (1) of the Constitution of the Republic, hereby passes into law, the following:

CHAPTER I General provisions
